1. What cookies and similar technologies are

Cookies are small text files stored on the user's device. The Platform may also use similar technologies (e.g. localStorage or technical identifiers) to ensure operation, security and, only if enabled, performance measurement.

2. Technical (necessary) cookies

These cookies are necessary to:

- maintain the authentication session and account access
- ensure security functions and abuse prevention
- store essential Platform settings

Without these cookies the Platform may not function properly.

7. Technical tools used via tags

The Platform may use a tag manager (e.g. Google Tag Manager) to manage the activation of services. The tag manager itself is not necessarily a cookie, but it may load services that set cookies or identifiers.

8. How to manage or disable cookies

Users can manage cookies through their browser settings (allowing, blocking or deleting cookies). Disabling technical cookies may affect the proper functioning of the Platform.
